A BEILLIANT SERMON AND A NEW DE-PARTURE---A NOVEL USE FOR A DOX-

MR. Epiron: On vesterday-the first Sun day of the new year-we heard at a neighboring country church one of the finest sermons we have ever had the privilege of istening to-one of those efforts which "strike oil." and form epochs in one's church-going life. The occasion was peculiarly interesting. The minister, after two years of laborious and Heaven-sealed ministry, had retired from the pastorate about twelve months since, and his place had been supplied by a worthy and excellent old brother, whose labors, though earnest and devoted, were comparatively unfruitful. On yesterday the former pastor, recalled by a large vote, resumed his pastoral charge.

The services were opened by calling for long-metre doxology, which was according ly sung; but the audience, in their astonishment, forgot to rise. This was followed by a characteristic prayer, which was not addressed to the audience, and the text was announced, Eph. v:16-"Redeeming the time because the days are evil."

By way of clearing the field, the speaker first told us what the text emphatically did not mean. That no such idea as that time lost or misemployed could ever be redeemed was intended to be conveyed. That time once lost was lost forever. That each day had its allotted and appropriate duties, its own work, its own sacrifices; which could not be put off or delayed without encroach ing upon the appointed work of another day, and reducing life to a succession of miserable failures. That the despairing cry of England's dying man, "millions of money for an inch of time," was but the wail of remorse, for hours which were wast ed, for opportunities which had passed unheeded. He next explained the scriptural meaning of the word redeem to be precisely what its etymological construction would suggest, viz: buying back. Time is not only "the stuff that life is made of," it is Anderson have enjoyed very excellent ad- life itself, it is death. It is happiness or misery, pleasure or pain, success or failure, as we choose to make it. Moreover, time is not ours merely because we live in it-because we occupy it or breathe its atmosphere; but only as we seize upon and utilize it-fill it with good deeds, with noble actions and worthy sacrifices. He told with rare felicity the story of the learned and laborious Grotius, who adopted as his motto, which he hung upon the walls of his study, hora ruit; the meaning of which is, the hour rushes, and the moral Grotius must rush too to keep pace with the flying hours -to seize upon them and fill them with their appointed duties.

The duties of the hour were briefly stated, and upon the divine injunction, "go ye into all the world," &c., we thought the speaker was particularly sound. He applied it, not to the clergy, but to every particular christian. Each of his christian hearers was equally called with himself to preach the gospel to the world's debased and sinenslaved millions. He who could not go or could not preach, could send some one in his place; and this, we take it, is the whole theory of mission work. Each several class of his hearers was solemnly addressed, and earnestly exhorted to seize the passing hour and fill it with the service of God; and make each day fulfil its mission in developing, rounding up and perfecting the christian character. He addressed with affecting earnestness the younger members of the church—a large number of whom he had with his own hand baptized and consecrated to Christ-and during this part of his discourse he declared that the answer to the first question in the shorter catechism, what is the chief end of man," embodied the grandest and noblest idea in the whole realm of human literature. The answer is "To GLOBIFY GOD AND TO ENJOY HIM FOR

The second clause of the text, "because days are evil." was then taken up, and the speaker appeared to find the greater evil and danger to the church in the fact that the times are apparently too good-the church enjoying too much ease and sailing in too quiet waters. Rest relaxes the muscles while labor hardens and tones them; adversity refines and purifies men as fire the gold; and opposition, so far from destroying, only secures to truth a certain triumph. The great danger that now threatens the church of Christ is too much prosperity, and above all too much popularity. Religion is too respectable, and it is too fashionable to join the church. The effect of the efforts now being made to build up Zion is to fill the church with a floodtide of dead-heads, who are scarcely fit for the world much less the church of God. The boundaries between the church and the world are becoming obliterated, practical piety is no longer necessary, vital godliness is almost a reproach, while wickedness abounds in high places, vice is rampant, immorality defiant, and Satan perpetually on the war-path. Even men who once occupied high places in the church are illustrating the proverb of Peter: "The dog is turned to his own vomit again, and the sow that was washed to her wallowing in the mire." Men who sit by day around the table of the Lord are found sitting by night around the tables of the gambling hells and drinking saloons. To remedy this evil he feared that the church required the discipline of suffering and sorrow, the chastening of adversity, the purification of fire. He had never felt it his duty to pray for persecution, but if nothing else would purify and vitalize God's church -if nothing else would arouse it from its fatal security-if by no other means the bride of Christ might be advanced and made meet for his coming-then God send persecution with all its fearful results and terrible consequences!

The sermon closed with a masterly application of its doctrines to the circumstances surrounding us; and a most impressive and energetic exhortation. One of his illustrations struck the writer as singularly appropriate-life being compared to "the ladder Jacob saw," which reaches up to Heaven and down to Hell; and upon which each of us may climb up, round by round, even beyond the clouds which intervene between us and the city of our God; or down, step by step, to endless death and misery; bu upon that ladder is no resting place-not a round of it will offer us a halting-place to sit still and do nothing. It must be either ascent or descent; either growth or retro-

It is of course impossible in such a sketch as this to do justice to the "thoughts that breathed and words that burned" of this most impressive sermon. Language would fail to describe the emotions that pictured themselves in the face and features of the Speaker, and we only desire to furnish to those who heard the sermon a slight sketch which may serve to recall it in all its fresh-

AYER'S PILLS have been known for more than a quarter of a century, and have obtained a world-wide reputation for their virtues. They correct dis-eased action in the several assimila-tive organs of the body, and are so composed that obstructions within their range can rarely withstand or evade them. Not only do they cure the every-day complaints of every-body, but also formidable and dangerous diseases that have baffled the best of human skill. While they produce powerful effects, they are, at the same time, the safest and best physic for children. By their aperient action they gripe much less than the common purgatives, and never give pain when the bowels are not inflamed. They reach the vital fountains of the blood, and strengthen the system by freeing it from the elements of weakness. Adapted to all ages and conditions in all climates, containing neither calomel nor any deleterious drug, these Pills may be taken with safety by anybody.
